GEORGE AIRPORT OPENS AS CEMAIR LANDS THE FIRST COMMERCIAL FLIGHT SINCE THE START OF THE NATIONAL LOCKDOWN IN MARCH 2020.

CemAir is proud to have operated the first scheduled airline flight between Johannesburg (JNB) and George (GRJ) since the lockdown began in March this year. The aircraft departed JNB at 11:30 on Friday the 24th of July and touched down at George Airport just after 13:30.

The aircraft, a CemAir 78-seater passenger plane departed from OR Tambo International earlier this morning carrying 50 people. CemAir expects to operate 4 flights per week between the centres with an increased schedule once Covid-19 travel restrictions are eased.

CemAir is delighted to be the first scheduled flight returning to George after almost four months of complete shutdown. The region has always been an important part of the airline's network and we look forward to growing the JNB and Cape Town services as South Africa emerges from the devastating effects of the lockdown.

We encourage passengers to have confidence in airlines as the industry remains a key player in the economic recovery of the region and the Country as a whole.

CemAir is an established regional airline in South Africa having offered flights from SA's major cities to smaller centers for more than 8 years. During the lockdown CemAir assisted in repatriating nearly 1500 citizens from 24 countries across Africa and the Middle East
